We're cleaning up crime

Ottawa is Canada's safest big city when it comes to violence: Statistics Canada

TIM WIECLAWSKI
tim.wieclawski@metronews.ca

Ottawa has the least amount of violent crime and one of the lowest crime rates in Canada, but police here are receiving the good news cautiously.

"These stats indicate something that we've known, that Ottawa is a safe city," said Ottawa Police Deputy Chief Gilles Larochelle. "(But) next year will be a better indication. If the stats remain or even lower then I'll be extremely pleased."

A Statistics Canada report released yesterday showed that Ottawa's crime rate dropped 5.1 per cent in 2007, giving it the third-lowest crime rate in the country at 5,457 Criminal Code offences per 100,000 residents.

And the rate of violent crime in Ottawa was by far the lowest among big cities, at 599 incidents per 100,000 residents. Quebec City — where there was not a single homicide recorded during the period — was second at 645 incidents of violent crime per 100,000 residents.

Only Quebec City and Toronto posted lower overall crime rates than Ottawa among the nine cities with populations of 500,000 or more. The national crime rate was 6,984 offences per 100,000 people, a drop of 7.4 per cent from a year earlier.

Mayor Larry O'Brien welcomed the report and hailed city police initiatives such as a new street crime unit for "a marked improvement in our downtown core."

"Citizens have expressed an increased sense of security," he said. Larochelle said it is too soon to

Across the river

By comparison, Gatineau's crime rate increased one per cent in 2007 and the city had the 12th highest crime rate out of 18 cities with populations between 100,000 and 499,999.

accurately gauge the unit's effectiveness, since it has been active for less than a year, but he agreed it's making progress.

"If we take it back to a year ago, the prevalence and the selling of crack cocaine openly was an eyesore," he said. "Right now there is a lower distribution of crack cocaine. People on the streets are having a hard time buying coke."

The new unit has arrested over 300 people for trafficking cocaine and laid over 1,500 Criminal Code charges.

"People seem to feel that crime is getting worse and the opposite is true," said Nancy Worsfold, executive director with Crime Prevention Ottawa.

"That's a ... problem when you have a city and country that is getting safer, but a feeling that it is not."

Top bank keen on our economy

ECONOMY Bank of Canada Governor Mark Carney says the economy has nowhere to go but up.

Carney yesterday acknowledged economic growth in 2008 will hit only one per cent, but he dismissed the idea that Canada suffers from "stagflation," which combines runaway inflation with an economic slump.

Instead, Carney suggested, if the U.S. returns to economic health, the worst may already be over here.

Sir Paul to separatists: 'Let it be'

QUEBEC Former Beatle Paul McCartney is playing down complaints by some ardent separatists that his concert on Sunday compounds the "Canadianization" of Quebec City's 400th anniversary events.

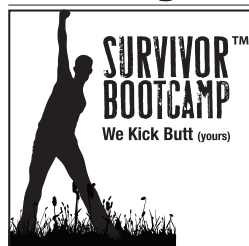

"I think it's time to, you know, smoke the pipe of peace and just put away the hatchets, because I think it's a show about friendship," McCartney said in a nod to his 1983 hit Pipes of Peace.

Quebec sculptor Luc Archambault issued a letter denouncing McCartney's arrival because the star is British. The letter was co-signed by several artists and some Parti Québécois legislators.

The province's call-in shows and Internet forums were swamped with criticism of the choice of U.S. rockers Van Halen as the headline act on July 3. Yesterday, Quebec Premier Jean Charest referred to the spat as "embarrassing."

McCartney's concert will take place on the Plains of Abraham where British Gen. James Wolfe defeated French counterpart Louis-Joseph de Montcalm in 1759, for control of Canada.

Pricey to park in the capital

A new survey shows the price for daily parking in the capital is the third highest in Canada. According to the survey, it costs motorists an average of $17 to park their cars in Ottawa for a full day. In Calgary, drivers pay the most at an average of $27 per day. In Toronto, people pay about $20 a day to park their cars. Ottawa's average monthly parking price is $195, ranking the capital sixth highest in the country. CTVOTTAWA.CA

enforcement blitz

The sidewalk is no place for a bicycle and Ottawa Police are making certain riders know it this month.

"Right now this is an information session, where we will hand out packages or inform the cyclist that they are not allowed on the sidewalk," said Constable Nigel Emaman, who staked out the intersection of Richmond and Churchill yesterday to nab cyclists on the sidewalks.

"And that will be followed up by strict enforcement," said Emaman.

Charles Akben-Marchand, president of Citizens for Safe Cycling, said the common justification cyclists give for riding on the sidewalks is that they're afraid of getting hit by a car. But in trying to protect themselves, they become a more immediate threat to pedestrians on the sidewalks.

"Many cyclists who receive a ticket say there are lots of motorists who are driving dangerously and they scare me into riding on the sidewalk," he said. "That doesn't give you the right to ride on the sidewalk."

Akben-Marchand said people who are uncomfortable riding on the street should take a Can-Bike course that teaches defensive driving for cyclists.

Cyclists are classified as vehicles under the Highway Traffic Act and are subject to the same laws as a car.

Emaman said this means they have to obey speed limits, traffic lights and one-way roads. Cyclists can receive the same fines as drivers and could receive demerit points on their driver's license for offences they commit on the bicycle.

No jail for baby's broken arms

SENTENCE A Gatineau man has been sentenced to 15 months to be served in the community after breaking the arms of his six-month-old child when she started to cry and refused to eat.

The incident happened in June 2006, shortly after the baby's mother returned to work after her maternity leave. The couple has since had another child.

The judge determined that sending the man to jail would be too hard on the family. His name cannot be released to protect the identity of his children.

A green hook to city's latest festival

TRACEY TONG
traceytong@metronews.ca

Aside from memories of a good time, it will be like the first-ever Rideau Canal festival never happened.

Ottawa's newest festival is promising to be a "zero-footprint" event as organizers are asking people to cycle or take the bus to attend, use water bottles and reusable lunch containers at the picnic and to take their garbage out with them when they leave.

"It's going to be a zero-waste event," said Michel Gauthier, president and CEO of the Rideau Canal festival. "Whatever you bring, you have to take it back home."

The free event, which runs Aug. 1-4 and is intended to celebrate the Rideau Canal's recent designation as a UNESCO world heritage site, kicks off with an opening ceremony in Confederation Park on July 31. "This event is important to Ottawa," Blair Patacirk, director of the Rideau Canal Festival Board, said at a briefing at Chaudiere Falls on Victoria Island yesterday. "The canal plays an important role for all Ottawa residents."

Attractions include flotillas — which will feature the Parade of Lights, the World Heritage Flotilla and the Canoe Rendezvous — that will go between the canal at the National Arts Centre and Dow's Lake.

The Bytown Museum will have special events for Colonel By Day, and an 1830s re-enactment at Commissioner's Park will show how the British military and tradesmen lived and worked.

The Energy Ottawa

TRACEY TONG/METRO OTTAWA

Green Rendezvous and environmental fair will feature more than 70 booths and 30 speakers. Concessions operators will be asked to use compostable cups and a close watch will be kept on recycled materials.

Rideau Canal bikes will also be available for use at the festival.

Even so, the event won't be emissions-free — the flotillas are all motorboat powered and vehicles will be used. But organizers say they'll track all energy used and emissions, including festivalgoers' transportation through on-site surveys, and offset that with carbon credits.

Event sponsor Hydro Ottawa is donating 2,000 credits to help the festival reach its goal of being a zero-footprint festival, said Rosemarie Leclair, president and CEO of Hydro Ottawa.

The festival officially launched its Adopt-a-Metre campaign — where supporters can 'adopt' a metre of the Rideau Canal for $20 — in support of the festival.

Colonel John By (Allan Meltzer) pedals to the Rideau Canal Festival launch event yesterday. The event is being touted as Canada's first "zero footprint" festival.

Female crowbar banditry 'unusual'

TRACEY TONG
traceytong@metronews.ca

Gatineau police are investigating two "unusual" incidents in which different women held up convenience stores with crowbars.

"It's unusual when it's a woman," said Const. Isabelle Poirier. "It's always a man."

In the latest incident, a woman attempted to rob a convenience store at the Petro-Canada at 255 Gattineau Avenue early yesterday morning. At 12:12 a.m., she brandished a crowbar and demanded cash but left without money when the male clerk told her that police were already on the way, Poirier said.

The suspect is described as five-foot-four tall, between 30 and 40 years old, with light-coloured hair.

It was the second time this week that a crowbar was the weapon of choice for a woman robbing a store.

Early Tuesday morning, a woman also used a crowbar to threaten the clerk at the Couche-Tard convenience store at 265 St. Raymond Boulevard before fleeing with cash.

Witnesses described the suspect in that incident as a 25-year-old woman with dark skin and long black hair. She was wearing white shorts and a pink shirt at the time of the incident.

Good food a festival feature

Ottawa Lebanese event expected to draw 10,000 people to sample traditional fare

TIM WIECLAWSKI
tim.wieclawski@metronews.ca

Heading into the weekend, the Ottawa Lebanese Festival is getting ready to feed the masses.

According to George Hanna, co-chair of the Lebanese Festival, approximately 10,000 people are expected to crowd into the parking lot behind St. Elias Cathedral over the weekend — and a lot of them are there for the food.

Sampling the traditional Lebanese fare is as much a festival draw as the sweet smoke of the Arguilly tent, or the musical styling of entertainer Massari.

"We're feeding a lot of

Many attractions

The Lebanese Festival runs through to Sunday, with entertainers, cultural dance and exhibits and a midway, among other attractions.

people. We have to replenish our stock every day," said Sofia Chalhoub, who looks after the food tent.

Traditional Lebanese dishes like the chic pea dip hummus and parsley based salad tabouleh are staples on the platters. But Chalhoub said the shish taouk is a must-try for those not initiated to Lebanese cuisine.

"You get it fresh cut off the warmer. That's our feature, so we're expecting to sell a lot of that this year," Chalhoub said.

Shish taouk is cubes of chicken that are skewered, grilled and marinated with a special sauce, though Chalhoub would not reveal the particular ingredients.

The variety of exotic dishes to sample attracted Maria Fakhouri to the platters yesterday. While her friends all ate shawarmas, she went for the kafta platter, which is ground, spiced beef in the shape of a sausage.

"You have a bit of everything, some of it is bitter, some of it's sweet — and it's not a hamburger," she said.

Christmas in July gets people in holiday spirit

TRACEY TONG

It may be summer, but Santa Claus and Rudolph weren't out of place at a busy Barrhaven transit station yesterday.

Morning commuters were delighted to find a bunch of folks embracing the Christmas spirit as they served breakfast at the Fallowfield Transit Station for a good cause.

An event to raise funds and awareness for the Christmas Exchange, the third annual Christmas in July served up breakfast sandwiches, yogurt, granola bars and coffee to an estimated 2,500 commuters.

"It gets better every year," Christmas Exchange executive director Marilyn Matheson said. "People have come to expect it."

Founded in 1915, Christmas Exchange provided grocery vouchers and hampers to 24,000 Ottawa-area residents in 8,600 households last year.

"We give them a little extra that lets them celebrate the holidays," said Matheson.

Rej Saumure knows firsthand the difference the program can make. The chairman of fundraising for the Christmas Exchange, Saumure's family received the organization's hampers when he was growing up.

"We had a family with eight kids and my dad was making meagre wages as a truck driver," he said. "My mom was quite pleased to receive a turkey and a basket for Christmas."

Although organizers hoped to bring in $5,000 from the event, donations weren't necessary if people didn't have cash on them, Matheson said, noting the event is as much about awareness for the fall fundraiser as anything.

It's a good idea to remind people of the cause, said Barrhaven resident Nicole Farough.

LABOUR A strike could close the doors of one of the region's most popular tourist attractions by next Friday. Eight hundred employees at Casino du Lac-Leamy have been mounting pressure on their employer in recent days. Lotto Quebec and the union representing casino workers in Gatineau, Montreal and Charlevoix are scheduled to meet tomorrow for labour talks. The union says its main concerns are changes to employee pension plans.

Canadian draws controversy

Mixed response to artist's New Yorker cover

BRIAN TOWIE
Metro Canada

Public outcries, condemnations by politicians, heated dialogue on 24-hour news channels — it's a perfect day's handiwork for a Canadian editorial cartoonist.

That's the response to the illustration on the cover of the July 21st edition of the New Yorker by Connecticut-based Canadian ex-pat Barry Blitt that depicts U.S. presumptive presidential nominee Barack Obama and his wife Michelle as Islamic extremist terrorists fist bumping in the Oval Office. Behind them on the wall sits a portrait of Osama bin Laden as the American flag burns in the fireplace under it.

While the magazine calls the cartoon — which has galvanized opinions and sparked worldwide debate — satire, others including spokespersons for both Obama's and U.S. Senator John McCain's presidential campaigns deride it as "tasteless and offensive."

Blitt, who refused interviews Wednesday, released an earlier statement to the Huffington Post saying: "I think the idea that the Obamas are branded as unpatriotic (let alone as terrorists) in certain sectors is preposterous. It seemed to me that depicting the concept would show it as the fear-mongering ridiculousness that it is."

Blitt is no stranger to controversy. In 2004, he was named in a lawsuit ex-media baron Conrad Black filed against Toronto Life for depicting the ex-media baron jubilantly arriving in hell.

But the contentious discussion the cover has generated is just indicative of a job well done, says Toronto Star editorial cartoonist Patrick Corrigan, who lauds the New Yorker cover.

"It's an excellent cartoon. It's hard-hitting and it does everything it's supposed to do," says Corrigan. "But in this case, the target was the right-wing media like FoxNews that have described Obama in this way. That isn't made clear here. The audience the New Yorker is speaking to, the swanky Manhattan crowd, they'll get it. But a casual reader who isn't interested in politics will take this literally."

This New Yorker cover by artist Barry Blitt, shows Barack Obama dressed as a Muslim and his wife Michelle as a terrorist.

U.S. District Judge James Robertson rejected a request from attorneys for Salim Hamdan, who drove for the al Qaeda leader in war trials

The Guantanamo trials are the first U.S. war crimes tribunals since World War Two. They were set up to try non-American captives whom the Bush administration considers "enemy combatants" not entitled to the legal protections granted to soldiers and civilians.

Afghanistan, to stop his trial while he challenges the military tribunal system.

Robertson heard more than two hours of arguments from Hamdan's lawyers and the Justice Department over whether the trial should be delayed. It is due to start on July 21.

Hamdan, a Yemeni, would be the first prisoner tried in the U.S. war crimes court at the Guantanamo naval base in Cuba. There are about 265 detainees at the base's prison camp, which was set up in January 2002 to hold terrorism suspects captured after the Sept. 11 attacks by al Qaeda in 2001.

Most have been held for years without being charged and many have complained of abuse.

Hamdan's attorneys said a landmark Supreme Court ruling last month made clear the detainees are entitled to fundamental constitutional rights. REUTERS

Funerals held for two slain Israeli troops

PRISONER SWAP Thousands attended Israeli funerals yesterday for two slain soldiers returned in a prisoner swap with Hezbollah and their grief contrasted with Lebanon's joy over guerrillas freed in the deal.

Defence Minister Ehud Barak told the soldiers and civilians gathered at the graveside of Ehud Goldwasser, 31, that Israel was "heartbroken" and had "paid a heavy price" to bring home the bodies by freeing five guerrillas involved in deadly attacks.

He vowed at a funeral held in the northern Israeli town of Nahariya that Israel would make every effort to retrieve other captive soldiers, including Gilad Shalit, who was abducted by militants from the Gaza Strip in a 2006 cross-border raid. REUTERS

U.S. approves financial sanctions against Iran

NUCLEAR The U.S. Senate Banking Committee overwhelmingly approved a bill yesterday that would expand trade and economic sanctions in another attempt to prod Iran to step back from suspected nuclear weapons production and alleged support for terrorist activities.

By a vote of 19-2, the committee sent to the full

Senate legislation that would try to clamp down on countries suspected of helping transport sensitive technologies and goods to Iran in violation of existing U.S. rules. The measure also encourages U.S. pension plan managers and state and local governments to divest, directly or indirectly, from Iran's energy sector. REUTERS

20 days remain until the official start of the 2008 Summer Olympic Games in Beijing.

Beijing in lockdown mode

Pre-Games security crackdown continues as foreigners exit in droves

Is the Olympic party over even before it begins?

With every passing day, Beijing is slowly going into lockdown.

Foreigners are being scrutinized more than ever before, random security checks have begun on the city's subways and visa restrictions continue to tighten. Whether Beijing's Olympics can be the open, welcoming, joyous celebration for which the Games have come to be known is questionable.

But one thing is certain: Canada's Derek Hildenbrand won't be here.

The 29-year-old Web marketing specialist from Banff, Alta., has called Beijing home for 4 1/2 years.

But on Canada Day, he left for Eastern Europe — a casualty of the Chinese government's visa regulations being more strictly enforced as the countdown to the Games quickens.

Like countless thousands of foreigners, Hildenbrand was in Beijing on an easily renewable F-visa. Now the government has terminated F-visas — and he'll have to reapply from abroad.

"It's a major hassle,"

Chinese authorities are tightening security in the lead-up to the 2008 Summer Olympics.

Hildenbrand said.

"And trying to find answers from the government is impossible. No one seems to know what's going on."

It's all part of the ever-tightening stranglehold of security that has gripped the city since the beginning of the new year.

With more than 100 heads of state coming to the Games, and the eyes of the world looking on, Chinese authorities have become — perhaps understandably — obsessed with security and are trying to examine and re-examine the status of every foreigner in Beijing.

National image counts, too.

Authorities have been shutting down selected bars, magazines, dissidents and websites — anyone and anything they feel might adversely affect China's reputation.

"They want this to be an absolutely perfect presentation," says Gilbert Kerckhove, a Beijing-based consultant. "They don't want to leave anything to chance."

For young Westerners who in recent years have flooded into Beijing — bringing their party spirit with them — it could be the end of an era, or at the very least, a long hiatus.

"There have been a lot of clampdowns," says Hildenbrand, "and it just doesn't seem to be as much fun."

Legitimacy or otherwise, foreigners have been a target.

In the words of the China Law Blog, an award-winning Chinese website: "China's law enforcement against foreigners is constantly getting stricter and the pace has only accelerated in the last few months."

The visa restrictions pushing many Westerners out today are only the most recent escalation of ever-tightening security.

But China's security concerns are real, Kerckhove says, adding: "They're scared to death, especially about the possibility of an airborne attack."

Just yesterday, officials announced Beijing will restrict aircraft landing and taking off during the opening ceremony on Aug. 8 due to security concerns.

And last month, Chinese security officials revealed batteries of surface-to-air missiles have been placed within 800 metres of the Bird's Nest stadium, the architectural centrepiece of the Games that will host the opening and closing ceremonies.

But the visa clampdown will come with adverse consequences for legitimate businesses.

"Business is drying up," Kerckhove says, noting that delays in getting visas have meant business trips to China and meetings have had to be rescheduled and even cancelled. He predicts that for the next two months, "industry and trade is going to grind to a halt."

Tales that rock

I'm not quite sure how we let this happen, but July is already half over. Adding insult is an unkind calendar which has allowed Labour Day to fall on September 1st, the earliest possible it can be. In other words, if you haven't started enjoying summer, best get to it.

With that in mind, here are ten things about rock music that you can use to dazzle people around the campfire or the barbecue:

Johnny Rotten, leader of Sex Pistols is married to a woman named Nora Forster. She's an heir to a German publishing and media fortune worth an estimated $100 million. Meanwhile, Johnny has apparently made a nice killing in the real estate market.

Jack White of the White Stripes once aspired to be a priest. As a real-life altar boy in Detroit, he was cast in a 1987 movie called The Rosary Murders.

As a kid, Eddie Vedder was a professional model, appearing in department store catalogues as well as several TV commercials and at least one episode of the original Bozo the Clown.

While attending University College London, Coldplay's Chris Martin was the captain of the men's field hockey team.

Billy Talent used to be known as "Pezz." Pez, the candy company famous for their dispensers, was not impressed and threatened to sue.

Between the time they were formed and their retirement, the Ramones played exactly 2,262 shows. Johnny Ramone documented every single one of them.

Blur bassist Alex James has retired to the English countryside where he's become a master cheese maker. He's known for a variety of goat's cheese he calls "Little Wallop."

Stephen Hawking, the renowned wheelchair-bound physicist, is a major fan of Depeche Mode. He wrote them a number of fan letters, asking to meet them.

The Longest Pop/Rock Song Ever: In 1996, Chris Butler released The Devil Glitch. Its 500 verses unfolded over a little more than 69 minutes. Bonus fact: Chris wrote both the theme for the TV show Square Pegs and the track Christmas Wrapping for the Waitresses.

But That's Nothing: John Cage's As Slow As Possible is currently being performed on an organ at a church in Halberstadt, Germany. It began on September 5, 2001 and is scheduled to end in 2640 after 639 years. (FYI: Weights are used to hold down keys on the organ.)

Carla Bruni

Album: Comme si de Rien

N'était Label: Naïve

Release date: July 15

SOME PEOPLE will pan Carla Bruni's new record simply because she's married to French President Nicolas Sarkozy. But take a listen to Comme si de Rien N'était and you see that this model-turned-singer-turned-political figure is one talented first lady. Her third disc is full of soft, acoustic tracks, which touch on childhood, life at 40 and her famous husband. It's all very pleasant, but she's not as passionate as fellow Frenchie Karen Ann, who does baroque pop better. Still, after a couple spins it won't matter who this songstress is sleeping with.

Bryan Borzykowski

Nas

Album: Untitled

Label: Def Jam

Release date: July 15

UNTITLED IS Nas's reflection on U.S. race relations. He's big on hypocrisy. As he wonders on Sly Fox, why is the violence of movies such as Kill Bill celebrated, yet criticized in hip-hop lyrics? Nas should look in the mirror. He praises women, but also uses clichéd female references. He says there aren't enough blacks in NASA, yet lauds gangsters. Aside from the occasionally inflammatory lyrics, Untitled is pop friendly. Backup vocals, jazzy guitar and soft keyboards help lay the foundation for Nas's articulate rhymes.

Jim Reyno

John Mellencamp

Album: Life, Death, Love And Freedom

Label: Hear Music

Release date: July 15

JOHN MELLENCAMP TAKES on the persona of a cranky old man sitting in a rocking chair with a shotgun across his lap. He's doing battle with the grim reaper in a voice that's raspy, raw, bitter and angry. This is not for John Cougar fans, but for lovers of Steve Earle and Springsteen's Nebraska. Mellencamp and roots uber-producer T-Bone Burnett have cut a masterful country-blues album.

Ledger's mesmerizing final performance

STEVE GOW
for Metro Canada

The Dark Knight
Director: Christopher Nolan
Stars: Christian Bale,
Heath Ledger
Classification: PG
Rating: ●●●●●

REVIEW The Dark Knight — filmmaker Christopher Nolan's follow-up to Batman Begins — definitely takes the caped crusader down a darker path as perhaps best exemplified by one character who prophetically says, "you either die a hero or you live long enough to see yourself become the villain."

Wow. Happy days. The film begins with Gotham City under siege by criminals. It turns out that the presence of a hero like Batman (Christian Bale) attracts a darker element and none more so than psychopathic villain The Joker (played by the late Heath Ledger).

The film is really a chess game mainly between the two opposing players and Nolan focuses in on the moral struggle of its fascinating lead characters.

Oh, but they're not alone. Enter District Attorney Harvey Dent (Aaron Eckhart), who in his attempt to clean up Gotham, gets himself tangled in the moral web, which eventually turns him into a maniacal vigilante as well.

I don't need to go into the plot details for The Dark Knight.

People will flock to this film (and rightly so) because Nolan creates a stunning visual masterpiece and the complexity of an antihero like Batman is intriguing, especially when played so expertly by Bale (although that scratchy Clint Eastwood impression does get a touch annoying after 150 minutes). However, the main reason people may run to see this movie is to see the much lauded portrayal of The Joker by Heath Ledger.

It's difficult to judge how good Ledger's performance is because it is impossible to watch him without being influenced by the tabloid fanfare surrounding his death (did playing The Joker lead him to his demise?).

One thing is certain though — it's a mesmerizing performance and if for no other reason, The Dark Knight is worth seeing for Ledger.

The late Heath Ledger stars as The Joker in The Dark Knight.

Space Chimps a champ

JIM REYNO

Space Chimps
Director: Kirk De Micco
Stars: Andy Samberg,
Patrick Warburton
Classification: G
Rating: ●●●●●

REVIEW It's a difficult line to walk. The cocksure hero can't be too arrogant, or he won't win our hearts. There has to be charm and vulnerability in the mix, or we won't care what happens. With Ham III, the sarcastic, high-flying, naturally gifted, golden-hearted, computer-generated hero of Space Chimps, we care.

Ham III, voiced by Saturday Night Live's Andy Samberg in this CGI kids flick, gets a lot of laughs. He's cocky, but it's easy to see through his posturing.

Space Chimps opens today.

His grandfather — Ham — was a famous chimp astronaut, and Ham III hasn't come close to living up to his family's legacy. He's a circus chimp who gets fired out of a cannon. But when Ham III gets recruited to lead an important space mission, he gets his chance to make his mark.

What follows is a predictable but entertaining story, kind of an Odyssey-Star Wars mix for chimps.

The kids will love Space Chimps. Kirk De Micco's script is snappy, and there isn't much downtime in the brisk 81 minutes.

A couple of times, a gag is on the verge of being too long when De Micco wisely moves things along.

Space Chimps is well paced and will keep the young ones attentive.

And although the story is tried and true, it still holds together for adults.

Many CGI filmmakers try to cram in as many pop-culture references as possible, as if to say "look how clever we are!"

De Micco uses them sparingly and effectively without getting in the way of the narrative.

Space Chimps is the type of film kids can relate to, and parents can describe as "cute" when they talk about it amongst themselves.

And, as always, the CGI technology is a feast for the eyes.

Mamma Mia!
Director: Phyllida Lloyd
Stars: Meryl Streep,
Pierce Brosnan
Classification: PG
Rating: ●●●●●

REVIEW You should know that you've been forewarned when there's an exclamation mark in the title of a movie, I suppose.

The first 20 minutes of Mamma Mia! are taken up with arrivals on a Greek island where Sophie (Amanda Seyfried) is getting married at the hotel run by Donna (Meryl Streep), her hippie mother. There's Sophie's bridesmaids, and Donna's old running mates Rosie (Julie Walters) and Tanya (Christine Baranski), all of whom greet each other with a symphony of squeals, and by the time the cast is belting out Dancing Queen, the first tremors of a crippling migraine should be lancing through your cortex like a knitting needle.

Based on the Broadway musical that made ABBA songs even more omnipresent than they were, it's the story of Sophie's search for her father, after learning that he could have been any one of three men her mother slept with during some eventful summer in the '70s.

The three — played by Pierce Brosnan, Stellan Skarsgard and Colin Firth — arrive on the island and become the catalyst for a blaring but improbable farce predicated on the assumption that no one is capable of pausing for a second and reflecting on the obvious.

It's a plot that, should someone have suggested the simple expediency of a DNA test, would have pulled the whole movie up short after just one song.

Stellan Skarsgard, Pierce Brosnan and Colin Firth try to figure out who the daddy is in Mamma Mia!, opening this weekend.

Screen Actors Guild and Hollywood studios keep quiet after their third meeting

INDUSTRY Hollywood studios and the Screen Actors Guild held their third meeting since the studios declared an end to contract negotiations, but the two sides parted company again without any public comment. The uncertain outcome of session came as the stalemate between SAG and the studios' bargaining agent, the Alliance of Motion Picture and Television Producers, dragged into its third week with no final act in sight.

"A small group from AMPTP and SAG met today. Both parties agreed that the contents of the meeting should be kept private," the producers alliance said in a statement released late on Wednesday. No further meetings were scheduled. A corresponding message from SAG likewise said both sides agreed to keep their interaction confidential.

The contract at issue covers the work of 120,000 SAG members in prime-time TV and movies, an industry still reeling from a 14-week screenwriters strike that ended in February. A strike by the actors is seen as unlikely. SAG, for example, has sought higher residual payments for actors from DVD sales and to extend its contract coverage to all made-for-

Internet programming. So far, SAG leaders have played down the likelihood of a strike. Many doubt SAG could muster the support in light of lingering fatigue from the recent writers' work stoppage.

Ferrell loves to improv

Talladega Nights star reunites with McKay and Reilly in Step Brothers

for Metro Canada

FEATURE Whether it's one of his more memorable skits from Saturday Night Live or on the big-screen, Will Ferrell always seems like he's having a good time. As it turns out, that was exactly the case when Ferrell made Talladega Nights with director Adam McKay and co-star John C. Reilly. After finishing the 2006 comedy, the threesome made a "blood pact" to reunite.

"You have fun experiences (on films) and you say 'let's do it again' and then it slips through your fingers," says Ferrell. "So we really made a point to sit down and meet."

Following several brainstorm dinners, McKay dreamed up a ridiculous story about two feuding middle-aged slackers who would be forced to cope with each other after their respective parents met and got married.

The result: the hilarious new movie Step Brothers (out next Friday).

As with their previous effort, Step Brothers mostly works because it's filled with moments of inspired improvisation and madness.

"Adam's one of the few

Will Ferrell's comedic talents will hit the big screen next week in Step Brothers.

directors who we kind of do the take once and then we begin improvising whether we want to or not," says Ferrell. "It's unusual because most directors have you work on the scene until you have it down and then maybe you try an extra take just for fun."

However, Ferrell defends the final cut insisting that it's mostly scripted.

"We improvise a lot in the writing process so I think even our written scenes have that kind of back and forth feel that make it seem improvised."

It's that touch of magic that has also turned the Step Brother trio into Internet stars. After launching the website FunnyorDie.com, Ferrell and McKay garnered even more fans with hysterical homemade videos like The Landlord (starring McKay's foul-mouthed toddler Pearl).

Not only has it been viewed over 57 million times, but HBO has now invested in FunnyorDie.com with plans to produce specials from the website.

Step Brothers definitely follows the same sense of humor found on FunnyorDie.com and, specifically, the only skit that stars all three Step Brothers collaborators — a sketch called The Green Team featuring unusual enviro-tips ("a compost bin is a great place to store a baby when you're finished with them").

When asked if that might be the next big-screen collaboration by the trio, McKay responds perhaps sarcastically, but without hesitation: "We'll pitch it. Sadistic environmentalists who go around beating people up — it's very sellable."

"We improvise a lot in the writing process so I think even our written scenes have that kind of back and forth feel that make it seem improvised."

Movie morsels

Hancock

Comic book aficionados will spot the patchwork of some of the genre's classically corruptible characters that make up Will Smith's flawed protagonist: Hancock drinks like Tony Stark, causes mayhem like Bruce Banner's better half, and like X-Man, is a nearly indestructible, boor who can't remember his past. Like all three, he has his heart in the right place when it comes to saving the world.

BRIAN TOWIE/METRO CANADA

Hellboy II

Just before the climactic battle in Guillermo del Toro's Hellboy sequel, we're reminded of a prophetic plot point from the first film that both sets up Hellboy III — or IV or V; it's obvious no one's really bothered by this dose of dramatic Xanax — and deflates the conflict to come by underlining the likelihood that the hero will survive to fight another day.

RICK MCGINNIS/METRO CANADA

Journey To The Center Of The Earth

Brendan Fraser stars in this 3-D film, which features, among other exercises of the medium, a thick glob of dinosaur drool launching from the screen and into your eye. An updating of the classic Jules Verne tale for the green screen age, it's been given the full-on 3-D treatment by director Eric Brevig with an unrestrained enthusiasm for the film's primary technical parlour trick. While you don't want to think too much about what Journey has to say about plate tectonics or zoology, its hurtling pace and unabashed enthusiasm for every unlikely new peril is the best thing about the film.

Meet Dave

Eddie Murphy plays both a human-shaped spaceship named Dave and the tiny alien Captain controlling his every move. On a quest to find a mysterious orb that crashed to Earth, he meets a family and learns the true lesson of friendship. It's a tricky role and Murphy mostly pulls it off but sloppy special effects and annoying supporting characters drag Dave down.

Baruchel on Buried

RICK MCGINNIS

FEATURE Most people know him as part of the posse of actors associated with writer/director Judd Apatow, but Jay Baruchel still makes Montreal his home base, and says that he's grateful when he gets a chance to stay in Canada and make a film like Chaz Thorne's Just Buried, a black comedy about a no-hoper who inherits a rural funeral home from the father he barely knew.

"I'm always looking for an excuse to pay some rent and stay in Canada," says Baruchel, who began his career in Hollywood with a small role in Almost Famous before entering the Apatow universe with the brilliant-but-canceled TV series Undeclared.

"I read one of the best scripts I'd ever read when I read Just Buried — laughed, read the whole thing through in one sitting and never had to force myself to keep reading.

"I hate using terms like this, but I really did fall in love with the character, man. The kid really did make me laugh, and it was very close to my sense of humour, this movie. I guess I've said it before, but when I read a script I really like it's like when I meet a girl I really like — I get butterflies in my stomach."

"That's literally what happened, and my mind then goes to that neurotic, negative place, where it's like 'There's no way this girl is single. There's no way this part isn't cast yet.' It was a full-court press — I was going to make it my mission to play Oliver. I had the most fun ever making that movie, man."

The put-upon Oliver is of a piece with roles that Baruchel seems to have made his specialty, from Undeclared to Knocked Up to the upcoming Tropic Thunder and Fanboys. Does he worry about getting typecast?

"Yeah. I worry about getting cancer, too, but it's like all I can do is do the things that I like. And I know that I have no interest in playing parts that I've already played before. That being said, I've got to pay rent and buy cat food. No one knew I was in Million Dollar Baby until I mentioned it to them. I think that it's a testament to that movie — I take that as a compliment. I can't be in any danger of being typecast if I play a retarded Texas boxer, which is pretty far away from what I know."

Jay Baruchel will hit the big screen next week in Chaz Thorne's Just Buried.

Pre-Emmy hype hits fever pitch

NUMBINATED: Ken Ehrlich, the executive producer of the upcoming Emmy awards, is hardly the first — and won't be the last — to call the Emmy nominations announced yesterday a "changing of the guard."

That was the way he saw things yesterday, in an article by Miami Herald TV critic Glenn Garvin, who did the sums on the nominations and pointed out that while the big four networks and longtime Emmy monolith HBO weren't exactly shut out — they "still collected 290 nominations between them, more than twice as many as all the other channels combined," Garvin points out — but the nominations were full of more pointed snubs than high school before prom night. The big news — or at least the news

you're going to hear most — is that this year's Emmys mark the moment when basic cable, and not just HBO, got their leg up over the networks and surveyed the land with a conqueror's hunger. AMC, FX and Showtime each got nominated in the prestigious best drama category with Mad Men, Damages and Dexter, respectively, while former network favourites such as Grey's Anatomy and Ugly Betty were left with a fraction of the nomination nods they've gotten in previous years. HBO, for the first time in years, was locked out of the best drama award.

They needn't feel too bad, however, as John Adams, their historical miniseries starring Paul Giamatti as the second U.S. president, led the pack with 23 nominations, and a solid lead over runners-up 30 Rock (17 nominations), Mad Men (16 nominations) and Pushing Daisies (12 — more nominations than actual episodes in its truncated first season, as E! Online pointed out.)

The popularity of John Adams is surprising, and conspicuous; it looks like the sort of prestige project that voters feel good about supporting, regardless of what they felt about it, or whether they'd even watched it all the way through. E! Online also pointed out that the honeymoon is clearly over for Ugly Betty, which failed to get a Best Comedy series nomination, while adding that Fox was disappointed in its ambitions to see Family Guy get a nod in the category, and become the first animated show to be nominated in that category.

I'm sorry, but Family Guy best comedy? It's not even close to being the best animated series on the air right now — the Bizarro world logic of awards shows is abundantly evident in the fact that The Simpsons, while years from being remotely deserving, had never been given a nomination.

And after putting that idea out there, I'm going to stop thinking about the Emmys until their Sept. 21 air date has come and gone.

I like to use a light and non-greasy formula for my face. The Clarins SPF 40 Day Screen High Protection is great for everyday use and it sits well underneath makeup; it also doesn't sting if it gets into your eyes. For the rest of my body, I like to use Coppertone SPF 50 in the continuous spray bottle, it's easy to use and you don't need to rub it in. E-mail your style questions to kim.elbo@metronews.ca.

Take your outfit to the next level with a waistcoat. Waistcoats (also known as vests) are great for extending wardrobes because you can pair it with just about anything and if you buy a neutral block colour like grey or black you'll be able to wear it from season to season. Throw it on top of a T-shirt or dress and add a little interest to your outfit.

short lengths

This season shorts are up and down, you can go thigh high or down low to the knees and all will be acceptable. Keep an open mind with lengths; a mid-length short can be worn to the office, a longer knee is great for a casual weekend and a short short can be worn in the evening or out to the beach. Pull your short look together with a bright white shirt and a dark colour stack heel.

Dearth of black models keeps Naomi Campbell going

FASHION INDUSTRY British supermodel Naomi Campbell says she refuses to retire after more than two decades on the world's catwalks because there are still too few black models in the fashion industry.

While many of her colleagues of the late 1980s — like Cindy Crawford and Christy Turlington — have moved on from the runways, the 38-year-old icon continues to turn heads at the world's leading fashion shows.

"I'm very grateful for my career, but I worry for the girls after me for the opportunities they get — the way they get treated. And this is one of the reasons I still do what I do," she said.

Campbell, who as a teenager was the first black model to grace the covers of the French and British editions of Vogue magazine, said many fashion designers still favored fair-skinned models over their dark-skinned counterparts.

"I don't do so many shows anymore, but I do count how many girls of color they use in the shows. It happens to be last year New York was the worst," the British bomb-

Model Naomi Campbell wants to see more black models in the fashion industry.

"Now at Paris Haute Couture there was only one black girl out of all the shows. It cannot be a trend."

Italian Vogue decided to use mainly black models in its July edition to highlight the problem.

"For me, it is something that is history-making. Something that I'm going to keep forever," she said about the magazine, which has a photo of her on one of four different covers.

The magazine also includes Tyra Banks, Iman, and other black actors, models and singers.

Campbell's career has been overshadowed recently by her troubles with the law. Last month, she pleaded guilty to assault in an expletive-filled "air rage" incident in London and was sentenced to community service.

Band lays down signature sound

KIM MANNIX VERMETTE
kim.mannixvermette@metronews.ca

Most bands will tell you there is nothing easy about making an album — especially the first one.

But if you can survive the intense recording schedule, technical frustrations and inevitable bickering that ensues after spending too many hours locked up with your mates, the final product might just be worth it.

For Dylan Shields, lead guitarist with Ottawa rock, pop, funk quintet Tympanic, putting in 15 hour days for a week straight to hammer out the album Have A Drink And Stay Awhile, was as fun as it was exhausting.

"It was a lot of work, for sure, but we figured if we can get through an hour-long show putting all our guts and heart out there, we can do this studio thing and still stay friends," Shields says.

In its earliest days, Tympanic consisted of drummer Carlos Constantino, sax player Charity Corbett, bassist Murray Matheson and singer/guitarist Troy Lajambe. The group performed around town for a couple years and earned fan support and a smattering of industry cred, thanks to successful ventures into competitions such as Ottawa's Supernova and Rock Resolution competition put on by The Bear radio station.

But last year they decided to bring Shields on board to give Tympanic a "more powerful sound."

Then, after making it to the third round of The Big Money Shot, put on by Live 88.5, and picking up $5,000, the band thought it time to make something people could take away from their live shows.

The 13-track, debut CD is meant to showcase the wide variety of styles and influences the band draws upon. Some of the members are adept in jazz instrumentation, while others were schooled on straight-up rock.

Geography also plays a factor in Tympanic's signature sound because, as Shields puts it, "everyone is from everywhere." Shields is a hometown boy, who happened to meet Corbett out east in Nova Scotia where she's originally from. Lajambe hails from Sudbury, Matheson is a Manotick native and Constantino is from Brazil.

The varied influences of Dave Matthews Band and the Red Hot Chili Peppers — even Radiohead — are evident in the first few songs. The themes run the gamut from the usual catchy tunes of love and loss to sharp political commentary, especially about our neighbours to the south.

"Our influences might be a little too obvious sometimes," says Shields. "But we also work really hard not to be just sound-alikes and to bring our own flavour to the music."

Tympanic's CD release show is tonight in Wakefield at The Black Sheep Inn. Tickets are $10 at the door.

Verticality exhibit turns art on its head

It's about perspective and perception. The way the appearance of a skyscraper changes when we stand beside it, head tilted up.

Or how the same moon can look gigantic on the horizon, or appear as a small orb high up in the night sky.

Verticality can mean many things, from physical space to a spiritual or emotional journey upward.

Tonight, 18 local artists will present their take on the theme of verticality in a collaboration between Ottawa's Enriched Bread Artists collective and Gallery 101 on Bank Street.

"It's an interesting exhibit because every artist has such a unique way of representing the theme, and certainly the work is not all what you might expect when you hear the word verticality," says Gallery 101 curator and director Leanne L'Hirondelle.

Butterflies, cast objects that have been flattened, and depictions of people climbing or falling — depending on your outlook — are part of the exhibition that uses sculpture, paintings, found objects and even video to depict the central theme.

"The video cast on the floor is very interesting and forces you to look down, which gives you this interesting perspective of seeing from above," explains L'Hirondelle.

There is also an environmental theme apparent in several of the artist's works, including Joyce Westrop's exploration of progress and excess using found materials, and Karen Jordon's use of discarded cassette tapes.

The Enriched Bread Artists collective often work together and host exhibitions in their own space on Gladstone, but L'Hirondelle says she was excited to work with them to further build support for local artists.

"Since coming to the city I have developed a real admiration for the talent here in the Ottawa and Gatineau region and want other people to develop an appreciation for that, too," explains

L'Hirondelle, who moved from Saskatchewan just over a year ago.

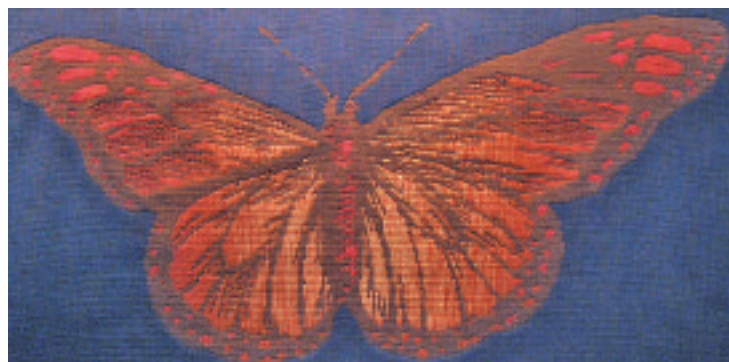

Other featured artists include Cindy Stelmackovich, Amy Thompson, Carl Stewart, Barbara Brown, Sarah Anderson, Uta Riccius, Jean Halstead, Daniel Sharp, Juliana McDonald, Marika Jemma, Hedda Sidla, Svetlana Swinimer, Tavi Weisz, Kenneth Emig, Dipna Hora and Gayle Kells.

Verticality opens today and runs through Aug. 23 at Gallery 101, 301½ Bank Street, second floor. Admission is free and gallery hours are Tuesday to Saturday 10 a.m.-5 p.m. The opening reception is tonight at 7 p.m.

Kim Mannix Vermette has a passion for exploring the local music, theatre, visual arts and literature scenes.

Artist Carl Stewart's butterfly works will be on display along with the creations of 17 other artists featured in the exhibit Verticality, which opens today at Gallery 101 in Centretown.

U.S. funnyman Andy Dick has been released from jail following his arrest on Wednesday on suspicion of drug possession and sexual battery. The 42-year-old comic posted $5,000 bail following his arrest in Murieta, California, after onlookers reported his inappropriate behaviour. IMDB.COM

Parker denies mole removal

SPOTTED Sarah Jessica Parker has denied she has gone under the knife to remove a beauty spot from her face — insisting she has not had plastic surgery of any kind, imdb.com reports.

The Sex And The City star was photographed apparently without her signature facial feature — a mole on her chin — as she stepped out for a baseball game at Yankee Stadium in New York City on Tuesday.

Pictures of the actress clearly show that the previously noticeable blemish has been replaced by a tiny mark.

But 43-year-old Parker is adamant that she has not undergone surgery, with her representative saying, "Nothing has been removed."

Meanwhile, Parker has been hailed this year's unexpected crush by a U.S. men's magazine bidding to make up with the actress after calling her the unsexiest woman alive.

The 43-year-old Sex and the City star was outraged last year when men's publication Maxim bestowed her with the unsexy honour, insisting the insult was "brutal."

And Parker's outspoken opposition to the title seems to have worked. The actress will receive her award in the August issue of the magazine.

Cruz hounded by press

ACTRESS Actress Penelope Cruz fears for her life every time she steps out in her native Spain because aggressive cameramen follow her every move, imdb.com reports.

She says, "In Spain these TV shows are on for maybe 17 hours a day. They are very cheap to make because they just have somebody running after people in the street with a camera, provoking them, insulting them."

"They are waiting for more and more drama ... Unless they have a dead body in front of them, it's not enough. I mean, it is just beyond crazy and completely unacceptable."

Jolie inundated with flowers

WELL WISHES The day after Angelina Jolie's twins were born, she received another special delivery: Flowers from each of her children, usmagazine.com reports.

"It was a blessed sight," one hospital staffer says. In addition to the blooms brought by her kids, the actress received so many bouquets that hospital staffers had to store them in her security guards' rooms.

Paris rejected by top soccer star

MOVIES Paris Hilton's attempts to flirt with soccer star Cristiano Ronaldo ended in disaster as the star's romantic advances were rejected, according to reports, imdb.com reports.

A source tells British newspaper the Daily Mirror, "Paris saw Ronaldo and immediately slithered past the dozens of women trying to get his attention. Then she climbed over one of his mates and planted herself next to him but he wasn't interested."

McConaughey a music mogul?

COMPANY Actor Matthew McConaughey is turning his attentions to a new project — he has set up his own record company, imdb.com reports.

The A Time To Kill star has already signed his first act — a reggae singer — and is approaching other major music labels for backing. A source tells New York gossip column PageSix, "His first artist is a reggae guy called Mishka. The album will be called Above The Bones and the first single is Here Comes Da Train."

Blair a common gay crush

ROLES Hollywood actress Selma Blair is regularly propositioned by lesbians because of her three on-screen girl-on-girl love scenes, imdb.com.

The 36-year-old, who split from her husband Ahmet Zappa in 2006, gained a massive gay following after locking lips with Sarah Michelle Gellar in 1999's Cruel Intentions. She subsequently went on to film lesbian kissing scenes for last year's Feast Of Love and for upcoming movie Driving Lessons. And Blair is convinced that many women often confuse her for a real life lesbian, according to the New York Daily News.

She says, "I have done three girl-on-girl kisses on-screen. And, yet, I've never done any (lesbian experimentation) in my real life."

"When lesbian friends tell me they're in love with me after our friendship has been cemented, it always shocks me."

Klum's legs insured for $2.2 million

INSURANCE Supermodel Heidi Klum's shapely pins are insured for $2.2 million — but one leg is insured for $200,000 less than the other because of a scar, imdb.com reports.

The German catwalk star's right limb is insured for $1.2 million — but her right is only insured for $1 million (GBP500,000) because of the mark on her knee.

She tells British newspaper The Sun, "They are different values because I have this little scar. I had to be examined in London. A guy came and inspected my leg."

Beckhams love L.A. living

AMERICAN It was only a year ago that Posh and Becks stormed our shores and settled in Los Angeles. Now David Beckham has blogged on his site just how much he and his family love their new life, intouchweekly.com reports.

"It seems like only a few weeks ago I arrived in Los Angeles with my family ready for the next chapter in our lives," he wrote. "A year later and we feel so settled here, everyone loves California and everyone has made us feel so welcome. I can't imagine being anywhere else in the world right now."
